Jada Pinkett Smith

The actress, 43, stars as a Mob queen-pin on FOX's Gotham

What's the best part about playing a villain?

I get to be so outside of myself. It gives me an opportunity to really explore my dark side.

Are you a comic book fan?

In my 20s I actually wrote a comic book about a black female. I would love to get it made [into a movie].

What's it like playing a totally new character in the DC Comics universe?

It's cool! It gives me an opportunity to participate in creating something that may become part of the comic book canon.

Ben and Jessa Seewald

I am so tired of reading about the Duggars. What have they ever done besides have a posse of kids?

Sharon Puchli Los Olivos, Calif.

I don't know of any other newlyweds who at 19 and 22 years old could afford to take a 10-day European vacation

Slender Man Victim Heals

Payton Leutner's family had many reasons to celebrate her 13th birthday on Feb. 13. Nearly a year ago classmates Morgan Geyser and Anissa Weier allegedly stabbed her 19 times as a homage to Slender Man, an online fictional character. "Physically, she has healed," says family rep Stephen Lyons. "But the emotional trauma takes its toll." Payton (far left) spent the summer recovering at home after the May 31 attack (which we reported in our June 23, 2014, issue) but returned to school for seventh grade. For her birthday, Payton—who owns a dog, two cats and a gecko—celebrated by visiting an animal shelter near her home in Waukesha, Wis. "As horrific as all of this is and has been," says Lyons, "they consider themselves lucky."

the key to skin that glows from within

Introducing Neutrogena® Hydro Boost Water Gel.

Has your skin started to lose its get up and glow? Dehydration is a common culprit. Formulated with hyaluronic acid, new Hydro Boost is clinically proven to quench skin instantly and release continuous hydration all day. Skin is plump, deeply hydrated, and back to its glowing self.

- Lightweight gel texture
- Oil free

WHAT IS HYALURONIC ACID?

Hyaluronic acid (HA), naturally found in skin, is a powerful hydrator that holds up to 1,000 times its weight in water. It plays a critical role in keeping skin cells* hydrated and “plumped,” resulting in supple, youthful-looking skin. We lose Hyaluronic acid over time, but the added HA in Hydro Boost works to help keep skin hydrated and smooth, with a healthy-looking glow.

After being found unconscious on Jan. 31, Bobbi Kristina Brown (in 2012) has been on life support at an Atlanta hospital.

THE FIGHT OVER BOBBI KRISTINA BROWN

BY STEVE HELLING

EVERY MORNING, BOBBI

Kristina Brown's family gathers around her bedside, praying that the daughter of Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown, who turns 22 on March 4, will open her eyes. All day long they speak in hushed tones as they appeal to a higher power. "We know it's a long shot that Krissy will wake up," says a family member, "but we're praying for a miracle."

The strain of a constant vigil has caused those near to her to be "at war," a source tells PEOPLE. While her family attempts to maintain a strong united front, privately they "are a mess," adds the source. Things unraveled even more over the weekend when Bobbi Kristina's boyfriend Nick Gordon, whom the family has barred from the hospital, publicly faced off against her father. "Let me in the hospital to see my girl and let her hear my voice," he tweeted on Feb. 21. "SHE WILL WAKE UP!!!"

Bobby quickly countered through his lawyer: "Mr. Gordon was offered an opportunity to potentially → visit Bobbi Kristina and declined to meet the terms of any possible visit. Obviously [he] is not as desperate to visit Bobbi Kristina as he wants the world to believe.”

One of Bobby's terms: that Gordon explain what happened on Jan. 31, when Bobbi Kristina was found unconscious in her bathtub by Gordon and Max Lomas. “Due to Mr. Gordon's failure to place in tangible form his understanding of the events that led to the hospitalization of Bobbi Kristina, there is no reason for any additional discussion with him,” Brown's lawyer added.

Police, who have spoken to Gordon and Lomas, have similar questions. While they have kept details of their ongoing investigation secret, multiple sources tell PEOPLE that drugs were involved in the incident. According to sources, Bobbi Kristina used heroin, cocaine and Xanax and drank heavily. “This girl was trying hard, but she didn't have any support system,” says an insider. “She was still dealing with a lot of grief over her mother.”

Following Houston's death in 2012, the fate of the singer's multimillion-dollar fortune became a subject of intense speculation, and it is again now that her daughter's future remains grim. (At press time Bobbi Kristina had been removed from her medically induced coma, but her condition remained unchanged.) In Feb. 23 tweets Gordon claimed that Brown and his family are financially motivated.

Meanwhile, family members have never trusted Gordon (“We don't all see eye to eye, but we all agree that Nick isn't good for Krissy,” says a source). While the family remains split over what to do next, a relative says they're “trying to keep a positive outlook.”

Patti LaBelle

On March 16 DWTS debuts its 10th season with an eclectic mix of celebs including Patti LaBelle, Michael Sam, Suzanne Somers and Rumer Willis. As for the show's long-running success?

“People tell me they grew up watching it!” says pro Tony Dovolani.

NICK
The Boyfriend

Although Bobbi Kristina called him her “hubby” on social media, they never tied the knot. If there isn't a will that explicitly names him as a beneficiary, he would likely receive nothing.

BOBBY
The Father

As Bobbi Kristina's closest living relative, he'll make decisions about her health but is not an executor of her estate.

CISSY
The Grandmother

Whitney Houston's mother is the executor of the singer's will, which means she is in charge of distributing physical property, like real estate. Bobbi Kristina's trust is separate from that.

What's at Stake—and Who's Involved

Bobbi Kristina was the sole heir to her mother's estimated $20 million fortune, which is held in a trust administered by several family members. She received 10 percent of the fortune on her 21st birthday, but the rest remains in trust.

PAT
The Aunt

In 2014 Pat Houston, Whitney's sister-in-law and a co-executor of Bobbi Kristina's trust, asked for a temporary protection order against Nick Gordon.

GARY
The Uncle

One of Whitney's two brothers, Gary (married to Pat) is also a co-executor. If Bobbi Kristina dies, the executors would likely decide what happens to the money.

RIHANNA & LEONARDO DICAPRIO: NEW COUPLE?

Rihanna and Leonardo DiCaprio fueled dating rumors on Feb. 20 when they hit the dance floor together at her star-studded 27th-birthday bash in L.A. They weren't "couple-y," a source tells PEOPLE, but "flirted." There was "definitely a little magic there." DiCaprio, 40, also partied with the singer in St. Barts over the holidays, "but they are not dating," another source says. "They're friends and have fun together."

JANE
KRAKOWSKI

Bestselling author A.J. Jacobs is tracing his family tree, and he's inviting all of his newfound relatives—81 million so far!—to a reunion on June 6, 2015. (Go to globalfamilyreunion.com to join.) Each month he's interviewing one of his famous cousins for PEOPLE. This month: Jane Krakowski.

A.J.: You are my aunt's seventh cousin's wife's husband's eighth cousin twice removed.
Jane: So we can still marry!

A.J.: We'll see how this phone call goes. I don't want to rush things.
Jane: That's wise.
A.J.: You have deep Polish roots. Tell me about those.

Jane: My great-grandparents came from Poland. Interestingly enough they were named Adam and Eve. But I do not believe they are the original.

A.J.: And where did they settle when they came to America?

Jane: Both my mom and dad's families moved to the great city of Brooklyn. I love the story of how my parents met, because it seems very 1950s Brooklyn. They met on a brownstone stoop as my father was singing a little doo-wop.

A.J.: How romantic.

Jane: Yes, I've got some good New York roots in me. That I try to get bleached out every month.

A.J.: Your last name means "from Krakow," the Polish city.

Jane: Yes. I visited Krakow about 10 years ago, and when you're named Krakowski, you are very welcomed. I loved every minute of it. They had Ally McBeal on Polish TV. People offered to drive us out to our family's farm.

A.J.: So your ancestors were farmers. Did you inherit a green thumb?

Jane: I have trouble keeping plants alive. Even plastic ones.

A.J.: Do you speak Polish?

Jane: Very little. Whenever my grandparents didn't want us to understand, they would speak in Polish. So I learned things you would never repeat.

'I Dos' on Hold for the Girls Star

In the wake of dad Brian Williams's NBC scandal, Allison Williams decides to postpone plans for her wedding

The fallout from NBC Nightly News anchor Brian Williams's recent scandal is starting to affect more than just his career. On Feb. 18 his daughter Allison Williams, a star of Girls, said that she and fiancé Ricky Van Veen have postponed their nuptials. "It's been tough," she told Seth Meyers during a Feb. 18 conversation at the 92nd Street Y in New York City. Williams, 26, said that when it came to wedding planning, she thought, "What could possibly come along that would make me not think about this?" The couple, who got engaged in February 2014, had already delayed planning due to her recent role in the NBC production of Peter Pan Live! "Then current events started happening," Williams said of her father's controversy. "So that derailed it a little bit." NBC has suspended her father, 55, for six months without pay in the wake of his repeated exaggerations about his experiences during the Iraq War. While Williams will be excited about one day walking down the aisle, right now she is focused on defending her dad. "He's a really good man. He's an honest man. He's a truthful man. He has so much integrity," said Williams. "And, yes, he's a really good dad."

With her father (inset) under fire, Allison Williams (with fiancé Ricky Van Veen) is waiting to wed.

Julia Roberts Says Farewell to Her Mom

The actress will keep her beloved mother close

On Feb. 19 Julia Roberts lost her mother, Betty Lou Bredemus, who once ran an acting school in Smyrna, Ga. The 47-year-old star's mom died at age 80 in Santa Monica after suffering from lung cancer—just a year after Roberts's younger sister Nancy died at 37. Bredemus once told PEOPLE that she called acting the “family disease” because Roberts's older siblings Eric and Lisa wanted to enter the field at a young age. Roberts's turn came later, but she stayed close to her roots and to her mom. Bredemus—who was photographed with her daughter (above) by Brigitte Lacombe for a 2006 INSTYLE magazine interview—said, “Julia was always a good girl. She had a bit of the tomboy in her and was always fun to be with.”

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

The singer, 39, lends her support to low-income women interviewing for jobs

Dress for Success helps disadvantaged women who are trying to better their lives, and that touches a nerve with me. I remember when I ran out of money in the early 2000s—I moved back to my mom's, and she was my angel for a period of time. Dress for Success is an angel to women who need, but can't afford, business-appropriate clothing. I've met some of the women who have been helped to get a suit—and a week's worth of professional attire when they get a job—and their stories are so touching. One woman was telling me she had to feed her kids, but she didn't have the right clothes to wear to a business interview. Dress for Success made a world of difference for her. She was able to get a steady job, and it was a beautiful life change. This year, 100 percent of the proceeds from the limited edition Fergie Footwear holiday shoe, the Reagan, went to Dress for Success. I'm so proud to partner with an organization that builds self-esteem and helps women make improvements in their lives.

TRIP OF A LIFETIME?

ONE-WAY TICKET TO MARS

100 semifinalists are vying for a chance to live on the Red Planet—forever

"A reliable living environment will be waiting for the astronauts when they leave Earth," Mars One's website claims.

The volunteers: ready to leave Earth behind

KENYA ARMBRISTER, 36
"I want to inspire people to go for their dreams," says the California pharmaceutical researcher.

PETER DEGEN-PORTNOY, 51
"My wife is supportive," says the Massachusetts software engineer. "She waved and said, 'Bye-bye.'"

SUE ANN PIEN, 35
"I've always loved space," says the L.A. tech company manager. "I wanted to become an astronaut."

PETER FELGENTREFF, 50
"This is what I've been talking about since I was a kid," says the California tech executive.

KAY RADZIK WARREN, 54
The self-described "nerd" and Nevada project manager wants to "promote interplanetary travel."

It's the stuff of science fiction: An initial team of four earthlings boards a rocket bound for Mars. After a 140-million-mile trip, they land on the Red Planet and build a home there, spending their days conducting research and sending data back to Earth.

That unlikely scenario will become a reality if Dutch entrepreneur Bas Lansdorp has his way. Lansdorp, 38, sold his majority shares in his wind-energy company in 2011 to create the space-exploration project he calls Mars One. Anyone who signs on has to really love travel: The chosen explorers will never return to Earth. "This is a mission of permanent settlement," says Lansdorp. "They go to Mars to stay."

Amazingly, 202,000 volunteers from around the world applied, and on Feb. 17 Lansdorp announced 100 semifinalists, including 33 Americans. The final 24 will undergo nine years of training before the first planned mission in 2024. Who will have the right stuff? "It's not about individuals," Lansdorp says. "It's about composing teams that can solve every challenge and overcome every dispute."

First, though, Lansdorp faces challenges of his own. Many scientists question the project's feasibility, and Mars One has yet to build a spacecraft or raise even a fraction of the billions of dollars needed. But Lansdorp is undaunted. "We have one huge advantage," he says. "Even our greatest critics secretly hope we'll make it."

- No. 1 House of Cards
Kevin Spacey has the world at his command—but no one seems to be listening
- NETFLIX DRAMA With several deaths under his belt, Spacey's Frank Underwood is finally in the Oval Office. He must wonder if he should have just gone to Disneyworld. Congress balks at his jobs project, the Democrats won't support him in the election, and his wife (Robin Wright) thinks he should appoint her to the UN. Season 3 avoids last season's idiocies—at least, in the six episodes made available for preview, there are no guinea pigs being tortured—with more emphasis on the ruthless nastiness of politics: The capital is crawling with Underwoods. And Spacey's performance has become interestingly ambiguous, with less of his undiluted-acid humor: Frank is a potential demagogue, but he may also be sincere in his progressivism. He's about as stable as a banana republic. (Season available for download Feb. 27.)

No. 2 The Last Man on Earth

Will Forte claims the title in a funny new series

TV COMEDY A virus depopulates Earth, leaving Phil Miller (Forte) to drive an otherwise empty RV from city to city in a fruitless search for life. Returning home to Tucson, Phil installs himself in an empty McMansion, decorates the walls with masterworks looted from museums and turns the swimming pool into a large toilet. Forte, who's also the show's creator, has given this doomsday scenario a funny, inconsequential silliness, even coming up with an inspired riff on Tom Hanks's pathetic volleyball bromance from Cast Away. No. 3 Secrets and Lies

TV DRAMA Phillippe calls the police to report that he's found a child dead in the woods—and practically minutes later finds himself being treated as the chief suspect. As thrillers go, Secrets is too broad, but it sets up an enjoyable tension between Phillippe, who comes close to Mark Wahlberg in his look of stunned hurt, and Lewis as a detective who's single-minded to the point of sinister. She's gone all Inspector Javert on us. (ABC, March 1, 9 p.m.)

No. 4 Brandi Carlile, The Firewatcher's Daughter

A voice that knows how to catch flame

MUSIC ALT-COUNTRY “You can dance in a hurricane, but only if you’re standing in the eye,” Carlile sings on “The Eye,” the first single off this fine, fiercely felt album. Backed by brothers Tim and Phil Hanseroth, Carlile can suggest vintage Emmylou Harris—delicate vibrato, acoustic warmth, simple folk honesty. Elsewhere she rocks out, venturing from the eye of the hurricane into a rain of fire. Her voice is able to do most anything—on “Blood Muscle Skin & Bone,” she turns a supplicative line (“I need somebody strong for when I’m feeling weak”) into an angry yowl. And the songs are never without grace, however gritty. Or vice versa. (March 3)

No. 5 MUSIC POP You might lump Rixton in with a certain other band of cute, young English guys. And you would be wrong: Rixton's R&B-tinged songs sound closer to America's Maroon 5 than One Direction. The production by Benny Blanco (Britney, Katy, Kesha) makes for a catchy and cohesive set, while frontman Jake Roche's falsetto soars over come-ons ("We All Want the Same Thing") and breakup ballads ("Hotel Ceiling"). It's been seven months since Rixton released their first single, "Wait on Me," but Let the Road delivers. (March 3)

6 The Best New Books

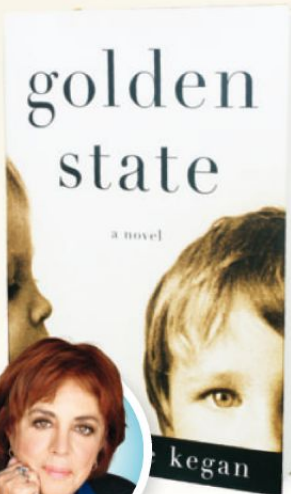

A bird who helped tame grief, learning to love after trauma and a novel about sisterly love—and its limits

EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Mac McClelland Irritable Hearts

MEMOIR When journalist McClelland returned from Haiti's 2010 earthquake, she was having flashbacks and crying continuously. Diagnosed with PTSD, she found therapies and confronted her demons even as she hesitantly navigated love with a French soldier. This is a brave, harrowing tale from a woman who struggled to heal her mind in order to open her heart.

Stephanie Kegan Golden State

NOVEL What would you do if you suspected your beloved brother was the man responsible for a string of college campus bombings? In this intense, provocative novel, a Berkeley woman's response to that dilemma nearly destroys her life. Her wrenching experience will resonate with anyone who's ever watched a loved one self-destruct.

Helen Macdonald H Is for Hawk

MEMOIR Obsessed with falconry since childhood, British naturalist Macdonald decides to adopt and train a goshawk as a way to handle the grief that overwhelms her after her father's death. Her evolving relationship with the feral bird, whom she christens Mabel, is the subject of this unusual memoir. Captivating and beautifully written, it's a meditation on the bond between beasts and humans and the pain and beauty of being alive.

NEW IN PAPERBACK

Akhil Sharma Family Life

When Ajay Mishra and his mom and brother leave '70s India to join his dad in New York, Ajay's sure they'll find the promised land—until tragedy strikes. A gorgeous novel.

Liane Moriarty The Husband's Secret

Cecilia didn't exactly mean to read the letter her still-alive husband wrote to be opened after his death... but she did, and all hell's broken loose. A delight.

Phil Klay Redeployment

Written by a former Marine, this National Book Award-winning collection delivers an unflinching look at the Iraq war and explores its toll on soldiers and their families.

Costner and Pratts lead an inspiring film.

No. 7 McFarland, USA

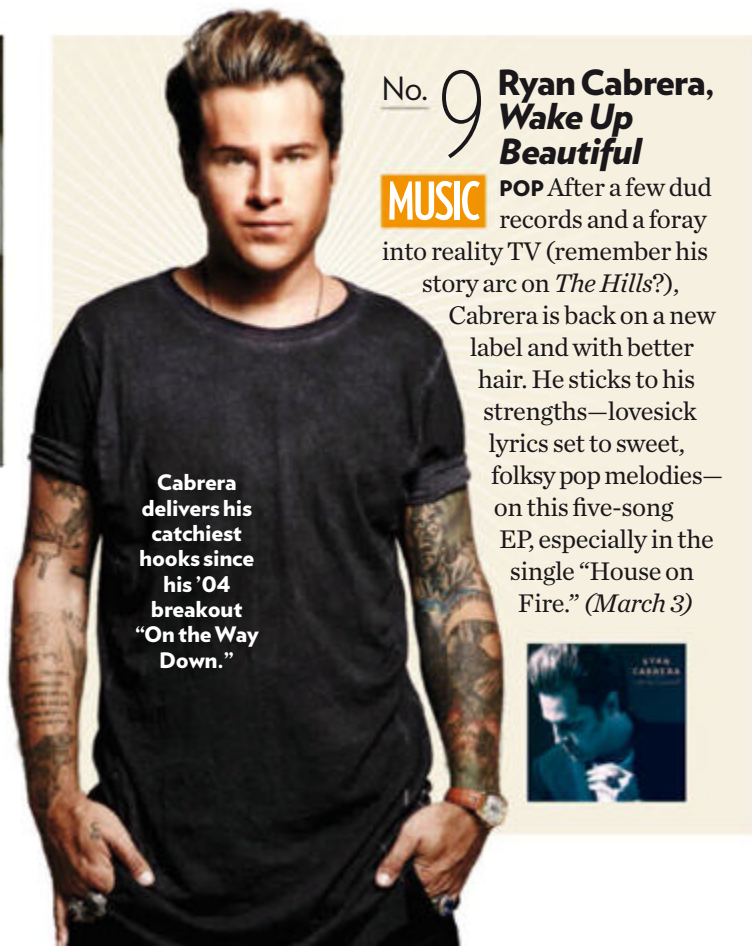

Kevin Costner in yet another sports movie? Yes, but this one goes the distance

MOVIE DRAMA A bighearted family film, McFarland works on every level despite its clichés. Costner plays Jim White, a failing football coach who lands in a dusty farm town. “Are we in Mexico?” asks his daughter. The way the students call him “Blanco,” you might think so. The coach soon sees that some boys, notably Thomas (Carlos Pratts), are fine runners, and a cross-country team could give them all hope. Costner and Maria Bello, as Jim’s wife, Cheryl, are terrific, as are the kids. But McFarland truly wins for being far savvier about race and class than Costner’s last film, the obtuse Black or White. (Now playing, PG)

Jason Isaacs (with Anne Heche as his boss) may be in over his head.

No. 8 Dig TV DRAMA A seductive redhead leads FBI agent Isaacs on a tour of an archaeological excavation below Jerusalem. Somewhere down here, she says, may be the Ark of the Covenant. “As in Indiana Jones?” he asks. Yes—and you’re Indy, dummy! This wild, far-flung thriller imagines a global conspiratorial net drawing ever tighter around ancient secrets. (USA, March 5, 10 p.m.)

No. 9 Ryan Cabrera, Wake Up Beautiful

MUSIC POP After a few dud records and a foray into reality TV (remember his story arc on The Hills?), Cabrera is back on a new label and with better hair. He sticks to his strengths—lovesick lyrics set to sweet, folksy pop melodies—on this five-song EP, especially in the single “House on Fire.” (March 3)

Cabrera delivers his catchiest hooks since his '04 breakout “On the Way Down.”

All in: Will Smith and Margot Robbie make being bad look very good.

No. 10 Focus

Will Smith and Margot Robbie give this sticky-fingered drama a light touch

MOVIE CRIME Focus looks pretty and dumb, so viewers may believe they're way ahead of this con caper. But even if you're still holding your wallet and watch by the end, you'll gladly have lost a few hours having a swell time. Stylish and just smart enough, the film lets Smith swagger through as grifter-crew leader Nicky. The Wolf of Wall Street's Robbie is the doe-eyed newbie eager to learn his tricks. The chemistry works, and Robbie displays real verve, while great supporting turns by Gerald McRaney and Adrian Martinez add to the fun. Just don't go using that poking finger to find logic and plot holes, or you'll let all the air out. (Feb. 27, R)

No. 12 CSI: Cyber

TV DRAMA Arquette, who's in a good stretch that started with Boyhood and continues with this CSI spinoff, is an actress to be reckoned with, even if it's hard to say why: Her voice is flat, she has no mystery, and her powers of invention appear to be limited. But she has a rooted force that gets and keeps the camera (and us) on her side. Cyber, despite its emphasis on our digital age, doesn't seem to be up to much that's new in the premiere, but the Medium star is still arrestingly fresh. (CBS, March 4, 10 p.m.)

Patricia Arquette (with costar James Van Der Beek).

FROM MISS INDEPENDENCE

THE SINGER ON MOTHERHOOD, MARRIAGE
AND WHY SHE REJECTS THE PRESSURE TO BE PERFECT
By MARY MARGARET

A photograph of a baby sitting in a high chair. Behind the baby is a large brown teddy bear. The background is a red wall. There are many colorful bubbles floating around the baby and the bear. The baby is looking to the left. The high chair has a white fringed blanket draped over the front. The overall scene is festive and celebratory.

"I really want to nail being a great mom," says Clarkson (with River in Nashville Feb. 2).

ENT TO MOM!

'I never thought I was going to be a mom, so it's very much changed my world in the most awesome way'

Kelly Clarkson, like most moms, has a daunting to-do list. On a recent day she's variously packing for an upcoming trip to London, taking a raw-food cooking class, dressing up for a date night, signing thank-yous for her charity benefit and entertaining her 8-month-old daughter River Rose. Adding to the happy chaos that fills the singer's Nashville-area home: her stepkids Savannah, 13, and Seth, 8, freshly home from school, and the family's three lively dogs—Maltese Security, Doberman Cairo and Maltipoo Wyatt. During a break from the bustle, she marvels at how much her world has shifted since she became a mom. “When the focus isn’t on you,” she says, “it changes your perspective.”

It's a massive change for the Grammy winner, 32, who went from being music's most proudly outspoken Miss Independent to a married mom of three in less than one year. And while her career continues to flourish—her sixth studio album, Piece by Piece, debuts March 3 and a world tour kicks off later this year—she says it's now “in a little sidecar” next to her life with husband Brandon Blackstock, 38, and their kids. “I love what I do, but I feel like I relied on my career a lot for my self-worth,” says Clarkson. “And now I’m more than that: I’m a mother and a wife and have this whole other thing going on.”

Of course, she's still getting the hang of motherhood, readily admitting that she's learning to prepare healthier foods now that she's cooking for five. “I know it sounds horrible, but before, I never really cared about the processed-sugar thing,” says the Texas-bred star. “Growing up in the South, it was never a big concern.” And the same self-deprecating charm that endeared her to fans as the first-ever American Idol winner in 2002 now has a distinctly new-mom twist. “I still can’t believe I made a human,” she happily tweeted after River's birth last June, adding “#firstglassofwineintenmonths #pump&dump.” She regularly shares photos and videos of River on social media and says her daughter's smiley disposition has been key to smoothing the transition. “She's the happiest baby on the planet. She's been sleeping 11 to 12 hours since she was 2 months old,” says Clarkson. “I do have some first-mom tendencies though, like not wanting anyone but me driving her around, but I think I have a certain level of peace I didn't know was going to come with it.”

For a long while, she didn't know if she even wanted a family of her own. After going through the pain of her parents' divorce, she focused on pursuing her dream of a music career. “I'm very much a gypsy at heart, and I just didn't think I would find someone who understood that about me,” she says. “And it's a very selfless thing to be a parent, and my line of work can be a very selfish thing. I didn't want to bring someone into this world and screw them up.”

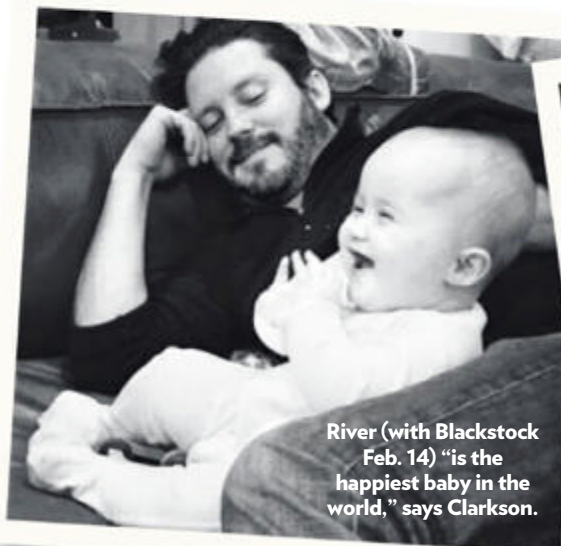

Everything changed when she met Blackstock, Blake Shelton's manager and the stepson of Clarkson's close friend and mentor Reba McEntire. “My whole life took a big 180,” she says. “I know it sounds cheesy, but I've never felt how I feel around Brandon. We're honestly best friends.”

In October 2013 the pair wed at Blackberry Farm in eastern Tennessee—a departure from their initial plan. “Our original idea was something very small here at the house, but it grew and became about everyone but us,” she says. “In the end we made it just our family, and it was perfect. I was so emotional, and I didn't realize I was going to be! During the cer-

The River Effect?

Clarkson's baby name is part of a trend. According to Babycenter.com, the name River is more popular this year than it was in 2014, when it ranked 261 versus 81 in 2015. “We were going back and forth on what to name her,” says the singer, “and I like androgynous names. We live on a river, so it really wasn't that creative. We were outside on our balcony and we both looked at each other and were like, ‘What about River?’ That's kind of cool.” And Rose? “It's my mother's maiden name. And I love alliteration.”

River (with Blackstock Feb. 14) “is the happiest baby in the world,” says Clarkson.

Secrets of Her New Album

1. Clarkson recorded Piece by Piece during her pregnancy. "I was pretty much trapped to my vocal booth since I would vomit 20 times a day. But being inspired by other songwriters got me out of my dark little rabbit hole!"

2. There was a moment she thought her career was done. "At around eight months pregnant, my voice changed. I was like, 'It's over! I had a great ride, but it's not coming back!' I was so distraught."

3. John Legend made one of her dreams come true. "'Run Run Run' has been my favorite song forever. I just had to find the perfect person to make it a duet. John just brought it."

'I dreamed big, and I think you have to have that drive to survive' emony Seth looked up and was like, 'What's wrong with her?' I was like, 'I'm just so happy!'"

Her tight bond with her stepkids (their mom is Blackstock's ex Melissa Ashworth White) quickly changed the singer's mind about parenthood. "Seth and Savannah made me want to have a baby. I didn't realize how much I would love [being a mom]. I love going to games, I love the homework," she says. "I love the challenge of helping mold someone's life." Still, she acknowledges that her fame can complicate things. "My worry is River feeling like she has to do something that's in the spotlight," she says. "I want her to feel like she can do anything and it matters. We want the kids to find their own niche."

One thing that doesn't matter? Fitting the traditional mold of perfectly polished pop star. "I have friends who are like, 'How are you walking outside in leggings and no makeup?” says the singer, who confessed to PEOPLE in 2013 that she was “in Uggs and a sweatshirt with no bra” during Blackstock’s December 2012 proposal. “They love Beyoncé, and she’s always diva-ed out. I love her too, but that’s just not me. My mom will tell you, even as a kid, I’ve always done the opposite of what people expect from me.”

As for the pressure to look a certain way, “In the beginning [of my career] if it wasn’t one thing, it was another,” she says. “Like finally I was at the perfect weight that people loved—I happened to be doing kickboxing at the time—and that still wasn’t enough. I’m never going to live up to anyone’s expectations, so why try? I’ve always had good confidence. If somebody says, ‘I don’t like something about you,’ I’m just like, ‘You know what? I’ve been hurt so incredibly deeper than what you’re saying, and I survived. So I’m good.’ You can’t count on your self-worth being tied to someone else.”

Looking ahead, she says she has “a country record on the back burner” and is setting her sights on a theater debut (“I want to do Broadway real bad! Maybe something brand-new or a revival.”). And yes, she’d like another baby “in a couple of years.” Reflecting on her diapers-and-home-work-filled life, she notes, “My best friend always says, ‘You just want to create the family you never had.’ I might be doing that. In defense of my family, it happens. People fall out of love, and people go separate ways. People are human. I’ve accomplished a lot, but I guess the biggest success I want is that whenever I die people will say, ‘She was so successful as a mother, and as a wife.’ That’s kind of my big goal.” ●

For nearly 4 years Daisy Duarte has cared for her mother, Sonia Cordona, 59, who has early-onset familial Alzheimer's, a rare, inherited form of the disease. Is Daisy, 39, fated to get it too? She chose to take a genetic test to find out

Am I Destined to

"These tears are not for me," says Daisy (with her mother, Sonia). "I worry about what will happen to my mom if I get full-blown Alzheimer's at age 45 and she's still alive."

Get Alzheimer's?

By NICOLE WEISENSEE EGAN

Photographs by ED KASHI

It's a busy weekday night at Los Amigos restaurant in Springfield, Mo., and waitress Daisy Duarte is rushing back and forth between customers. She's also keeping a close eye on her mother, who sits alone at a table. "Watch this," Daisy tells a visitor. "If I put a pen and paper here, my mom will immediately start scribbling." Sonia Cardona does just that. Since she was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease in 2013, childlike pastimes tend to keep Sonia, a onetime teacher's aide, amused. Daisy, relieved to see her occupied, looks pale and worried nonetheless. "I went to bed at 5 a.m. and got up at 9 a.m. because I can't fall asleep," she admits. "That's been happening the past few days. I'm nervous about tomorrow."

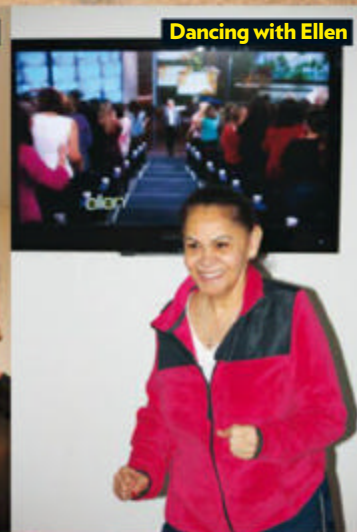

For good reason. The following day Daisy was due to get life-altering news: the results of a genetic test that would reveal whether she, like her mother, carries a gene for early-onset familial Alzheimer's, a rare form of the devastating illness (see box). Seventy-five percent of Sonia's relatives had the disease, and Daisy had a 50/50 chance of inheriting it. Unmarried and childless, Daisy has been her mother's full-time caretaker for nearly four years and decided to take the scary step "to be prepared," she says. Though there is no effective treatment for Alzheimer's, there are drug trials, and "if they're trying to find a cure, I want to be involved. I have nieces and nephews. I would like by their time to have a cure or at least stop it from being so aggressive."

In deciding to get tested, Daisy joins a growing number of people who are electing to learn their genetic destinies. But it's an agonizing decision when the disease in question is one for which nothing can be done. "You can't unring that bell," says Robert Green, a geneticist at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston and director of a national study evaluating how people respond to their Alzheimer's genetic-had been dreading: "You have the same mutation as your mother," Owen told her gently. Daisy put her head in her hands and wept. "I already knew," she said, wiping her tears with tissues as her mother, who accompanies her everywhere, stroked her back. Sonia didn't understand the conversation but knew distress in her child when she saw it. "Are you okay?" she asked. Daisy nodded and hugged her tight.

Since that day, Daisy has been coming to terms with what awaits her. She's been told the positive result means she will get Alzheimer's by the time she is 65; the average life span after symptoms appear is seven years. Her biggest worry is for Sonia. "She's everything to me. I've got to take care

Early-Onset Alzheimer's: The Facts

Of the estimated 5.2 million Americans who have Alzheimer's disease, some 200,000 have the early-onset form, according to the Alzheimer's Association (alz.org). Not all early forms are genetic, but experts recommend offering testing to families where many people were diagnosed before age 65. "There are gene mutations that directly cause early-onset," says Susan Hahn, an Alzheimer's expert for the National Society of Genetic Counselors. "Testing can facilitate choices such as whether to have children or pursue a certain career." The disease is the subject of the film Still Alice:

Julianne Moore's character is diagnosed; her younger daughter, played by Kristen Stewart, decides not to get tested. "I cried through the whole thing," says Daisy, who took her mother to see it.

recently neither woman had health insurance. Daisy's niece helps out when she can, but neither of her siblings is in a position to take her in permanently should the need arise. (And so far Daisy is the only one of Sonia's three children who has been tested. Says her brother Juan, 37: "I don't want to know.")

Luckily, Daisy has good friends. "A group of us have let her know we'll be there for her no matter what," says Andi Pachl, 34, a consultant. "If family doesn't step in to care for her mother, we will."

For now, Daisy is trying to make the most of whatever time she has left with her mom. In September Andi and Daisy took Sonia to Las Vegas—a trip her mom had always hoped to take. Mother and daughter take daily walks, have dinners out, go dancing and to pro baseball games and shoot pool, all activities Sonia still seems to enjoy. But she's inarguably slipping. "She talks gibberish—sometimes she remembers me, sometimes she doesn't," Daisy says. "She doesn't know how to get into a car; she talks to her reflection in mirrors. I'm scared for the day when she's bedridden for good. I don't know how much time she has. This disease doesn't tell you."

As for Daisy, she says she forgets little things, like where she left her keys, but no more than she ever did. In November she entered a clinical trial that is testing two different drugs researchers hope might delay Alzheimer's symptoms. "No one has ever survived Alzheimer's, and we aim to change that," says Dr. Randall Bateman of Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, the trial's principal investigator. Daisy has also been working with local groups to raise awareness about the disease.

No matter how the rest of her life plays out, she takes great pride in the care she has been able to give her mother. "Her doctor can't believe how well she's doing," Daisy says. "He said he's seen several patients at the same stage she's at, and they were all in nursing homes or bedridden. He said, 'Just keep doing what you're doing.'"

That—along with cherishing every moment—is exactly what she plans. "I have the gene; I don't have the disease yet," she says. "All I have to do is take it one day at a time." ●

As a face of the brand, "they always give me beautiful things to wear," the Best Actress nominee tells PEOPLE of her Dior Haute Couture polka-dot confection banded just below her derriere.

Felicity Jones

"It feels very much like a warrior-queen dress," the Best Actress nominee says of her custom satin Alexander McQueen gown, which was hand sewn to make the 3D-flower embroidery.

Gwyneth Paltrow

Paltrow's Ralph & Russo Couture custom dress (featuring a giant rosette) and sleek hair combined for a look that was "beautiful, elegant and not overdone," says her hairstylist Blake Erik for John Frieda.

Laura Dern

"The structure and construction inside and out is truly masterful craftsmanship," says stylist Ilaria Urbinati of the nominee's custom Alberta Ferretti dress. "All that metal beading is so heavy!"

Scarlett Johansson

"The dress is such a statement," says her makeup artist Mai Quynh for Dolce & Gabbana of the new mom's Atelier Versace emerald-green gown with a Swarovski crystal collar.

Keira Knightley

The nominee (and mom-to-be!) chose this nude Valentino Haute Couture gown embroidered with florals and French phrases. Why? "Because I really liked it!" she says. C'est la vie.

Naomi Watts

"We loved the art deco feeling," says stylist Jeanann Williams of the presenter's Armani Privé Couture dress with an embellished black panel. "The view of the back just killed us all."

Jared Leto

The fashion-forward presenter pushed the envelope on the traditional tuxedo with a Givenchy baby-blue custom creation complemented by his long locks. To top it all off? A cool retro boutonniere.

Lupita Nyong'o IN CALVIN KLEIN COLLECTION

If you think Nyong'o's gown looks like a dream, that's because it stemmed from one. "Lupita had a dream that she would wear a white dress to the Oscars," women's creative director Francisco Costa tells PEOPLE. Bringing the vision to life was no small feat: "We started developing concepts in November," he said. Over 6,000 pearls of five different sizes and varieties were hand-sewn onto the intricate bustier and skirt. But what's it like wearing all those embellishments? "It's actually quite comfortable!" Nyong'o said on the red carpet.

Julianne Moore

IN CHANEL HAUTE COUTURE

"It's a masterpiece," stylist Leslie Fremar tells PEOPLE of this Karl Lagerfeld creation. Indeed, it took a team of 27 people to painstakingly stitch the gown's 160 paillettes and 80,000 hand-painted resin sequins. "They brought paint swatches to pick the color of her dress," Fremar adds. "The details are mind-blowing."

Emma Stone

IN ELIE SAAB HAUTE COUTURE

The sleek chartreuse number with long sleeves and a sexy open back gave off a "1930s feel" with a modern twist, says Stone's stylist Petra Flannery. And although they "wanted to go super-feminine" for the big night, Flannery did add a little edge via diamond-studded Tiffany & Co. cuffs (inset) that looked like they were part of the gown. As for the inevitable hue haters? "This color is not something that many people use, but when you use it the right way, it's very chic," Flannery says. "Emma's young, she's fresh and she's someone who takes risks with fashion."

Getting Ready with Reese!

All the details on the Best Actress nominee's look—straight from her hair pro Adir Abergel

HOW HE DID IT

Abergel (above, in an Oscar-night shot with Reese Witherspoon) didn't let the rain alter his vision for the Wild star's mane. "I was confident that if I used the right products, I could get away with it," he tells PEOPLE. Plus, he had a backup plan: "I told [her husband] Jim [Toth], 'I'm going to give you some hair spray for your pocket!'"

Behind the Hair

How the stars' stylists whipped up the night's most head-turning buns, ponytails and waves

Jenna Dewan Tatum

"She was nervous about having her hair sleek in the front, but she went out on a limb and tried it," says hairstylist Derek Williams, who used a KMS California serum to tame rain-induced flyaways.

Rosamund Pike

It took the nominee's hairstylist Kylee Heath for Oscar Blandi two days to decide on an updo.

The "romantic" look, which reveals the star's edgy undercut, ultimately required "15 or so bobby pins" to secure.

Emma Stone

L'Oréal Paris hairstylist Mara Roszak opted for soft waves because the star's green Elie Saab Haute Couture gown and red hair "felt like a watercolor painting."

Gina Rodriguez

The actress's colossal chignon took hairstylist Paul Norton for John Frieda countless pins ("there could easily be 300 in there," he admits) and about an hour and a half to create. "That's mostly because Gina is such a blast," he says. "We often take breaks to laugh!"

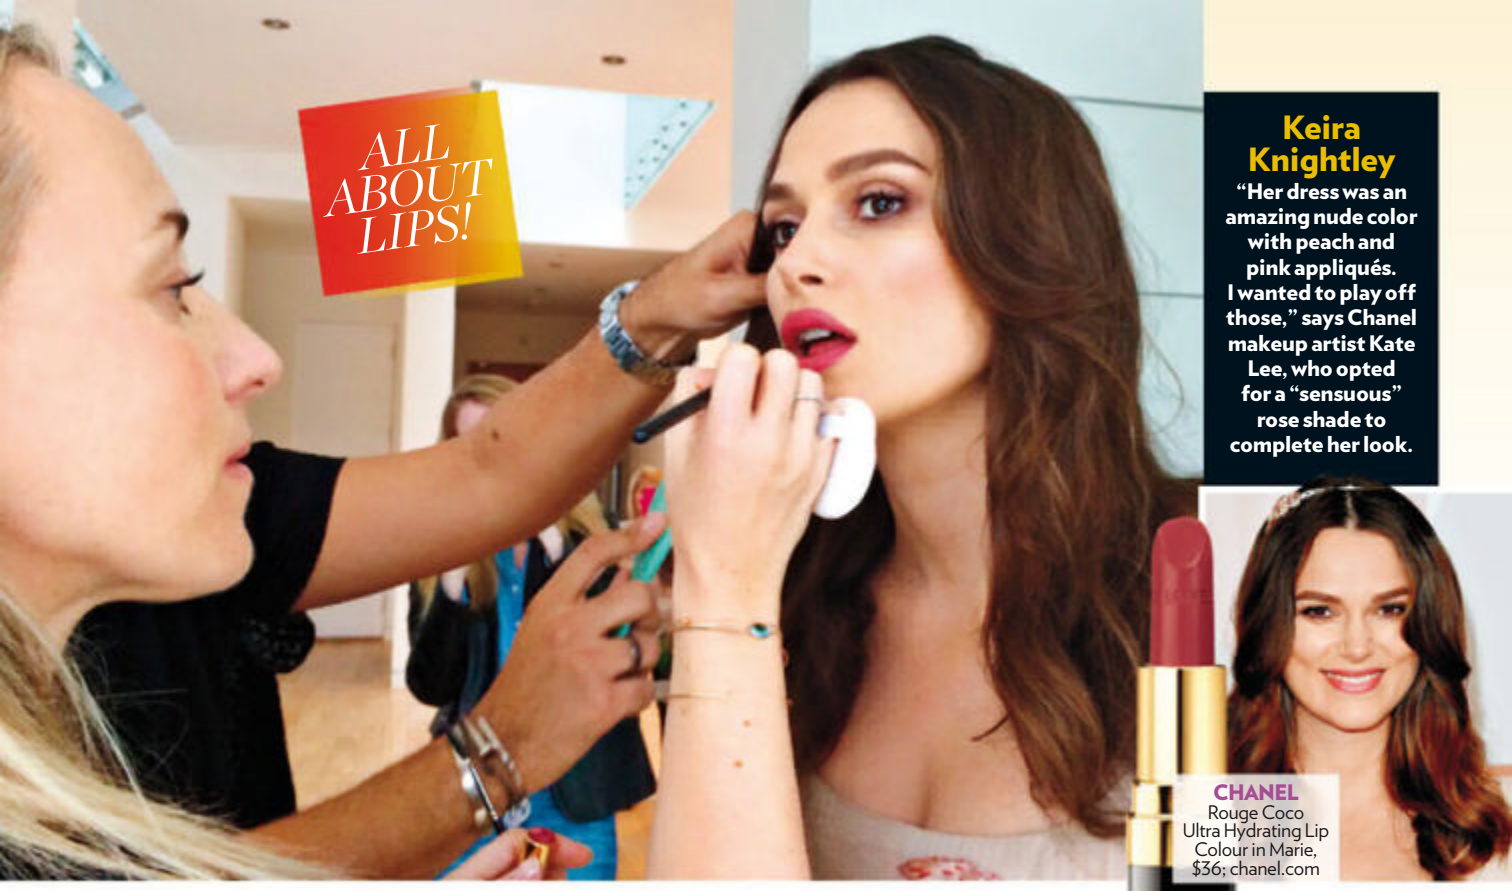

Gwyneth Paltrow

Her sophisticated style—which consisted of three separate sections—may look complex, but hairstylist Blake Erik for John Frieda insists it was "quite simple to create."

Felicity Jones

The Best Actress nominee had input on her do. "She said, 'I look good with my hair pulled back, so let's do that,'" says hairstylist Tommy Buckett for Garnier. "And because she had just cut her fringe, we had a great bang to work with."

THE GLOVES THAT BROKE THE INTERNET

OSCAR'S MOST MEME-ORABLE OUTFIT

Before wowing the audience with her Sound of Music tribute, newly engaged Lady Gaga debuted a custom-made Azzedine Alaïa gown, offset by large red gloves. The Internet reacted swiftly, placing Gaga in settings a little less glam. But it's not as though the avant-garde touch was shocking. "Everyone expects something from Gaga," stylist Brandon Maxwell tells PEOPLE.

SWEET VICTORY

Winning for Best Actor, The Theory of Everything’s Eddie Redmayne had the night’s most exuberant reaction. He dedicated his award to Stephen Hawking and his family and “people around the world battling ALS.” Addressing his wife of two months, Hannah Bagshawe, he said, “We have a new fellow coming to share our apartment!”

WORDS OF WISDOM

A SCREENWRITER'S SOARING SPEECH

Graham Moore didn't just write one of the most moving films of last year, the Alan Turing biopic The Imitation Game, he also gave one of the night's most heartfelt speeches. After revealing his own suicide attempt at 16, the Best Adapted Screenplay winner, 33, exhorted young people to "stay weird. Stay different." Having battled depression for years, "I'm learning to manage it better and better," he told PEOPLE. Growing up as a "tremendous science nerd," he idolized the WWII code breaker. Although Turing was gay and Moore is not, "there are lots of different reasons for people to feel like outsiders," says the Chicagoan.

The film's stars, Benedict Cumberbatch (inset) and Keira Knightley, "were both crying" after Moore's win, he says, adding, "What kid who loves movies doesn't dream of one day giving an Oscar acceptance speech? And how many people get to do it? I'm very aware of how lucky I am."

WHEN OSCAR TAKES A STAND

CIVIL RIGHTS

Best Original Song winners Lonnie Lynn (Common) and John Stephens (John Legend) spoke of the film's resonance. "Selma is now," Legend said. "The struggle for freedom and justice is real."

IMMIGRANT RIGHTS

The second Mexican director to win an Oscar in as many years (after Gravity's Alfonso Cuarón), Birdman's Alejandro González Iñárritu called for "dignity and respect" for newcomers "in this incredible immigrant nation."

WAGE EQUALITY

Patricia Arquette, who won an Oscar for her Best Supporting Actress turn in Boyhood, used her spotlight to demand equal pay for women in a thunderous speech. "It's our time to have wage equality once and for all," she said.

A PIECE OF REESE'S MIND

She presented the award for Best Makeup and Hairstyling, but Reese Witherspoon wanted to talk about more than her look. A proponent of the #AskHerMore movement, she posted on Instagram that she'd like to entertain questions such as "What's the biggest risk you've taken that you feel has paid off?"

TEAM SELMA

Oprah Winfrey (in Vera Wang), who insisted, "Hollywood does need to have more diversity," but denied that Selma was snubbed, sneaked out to the lobby during a commercial break and "posed for selfies with everyone," said an onlooker.

GENDER DEFENDER

After she won for Boyhood and called for equal pay for women, Patricia Arquette (in a dress by her friend Rosetta Getty) said, "I almost fainted backstage. I needed to sit down. It was surreal."

THE SOUND OF GAGA

Paying tribute to the 50th anniversary of The Sound of Music, a newly engaged Lady Gaga dazzled the room with a medley of songs from the classic film. “I have always been a fan, but last night we bonded and now I have a new friend,” legendary Music star Julie Andrews (below) told PEOPLE the next day about the singer’s “wonderful performance.”

MUSICAL MOMENTS

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT?

After his “Adele Dazeem” bungle last year, John Travolta reunited with Idina Menzel to present the award for Best Original Song—and engaged in some face touching. A source tells PEOPLE it was planned: “They wanted it to look intimate.”

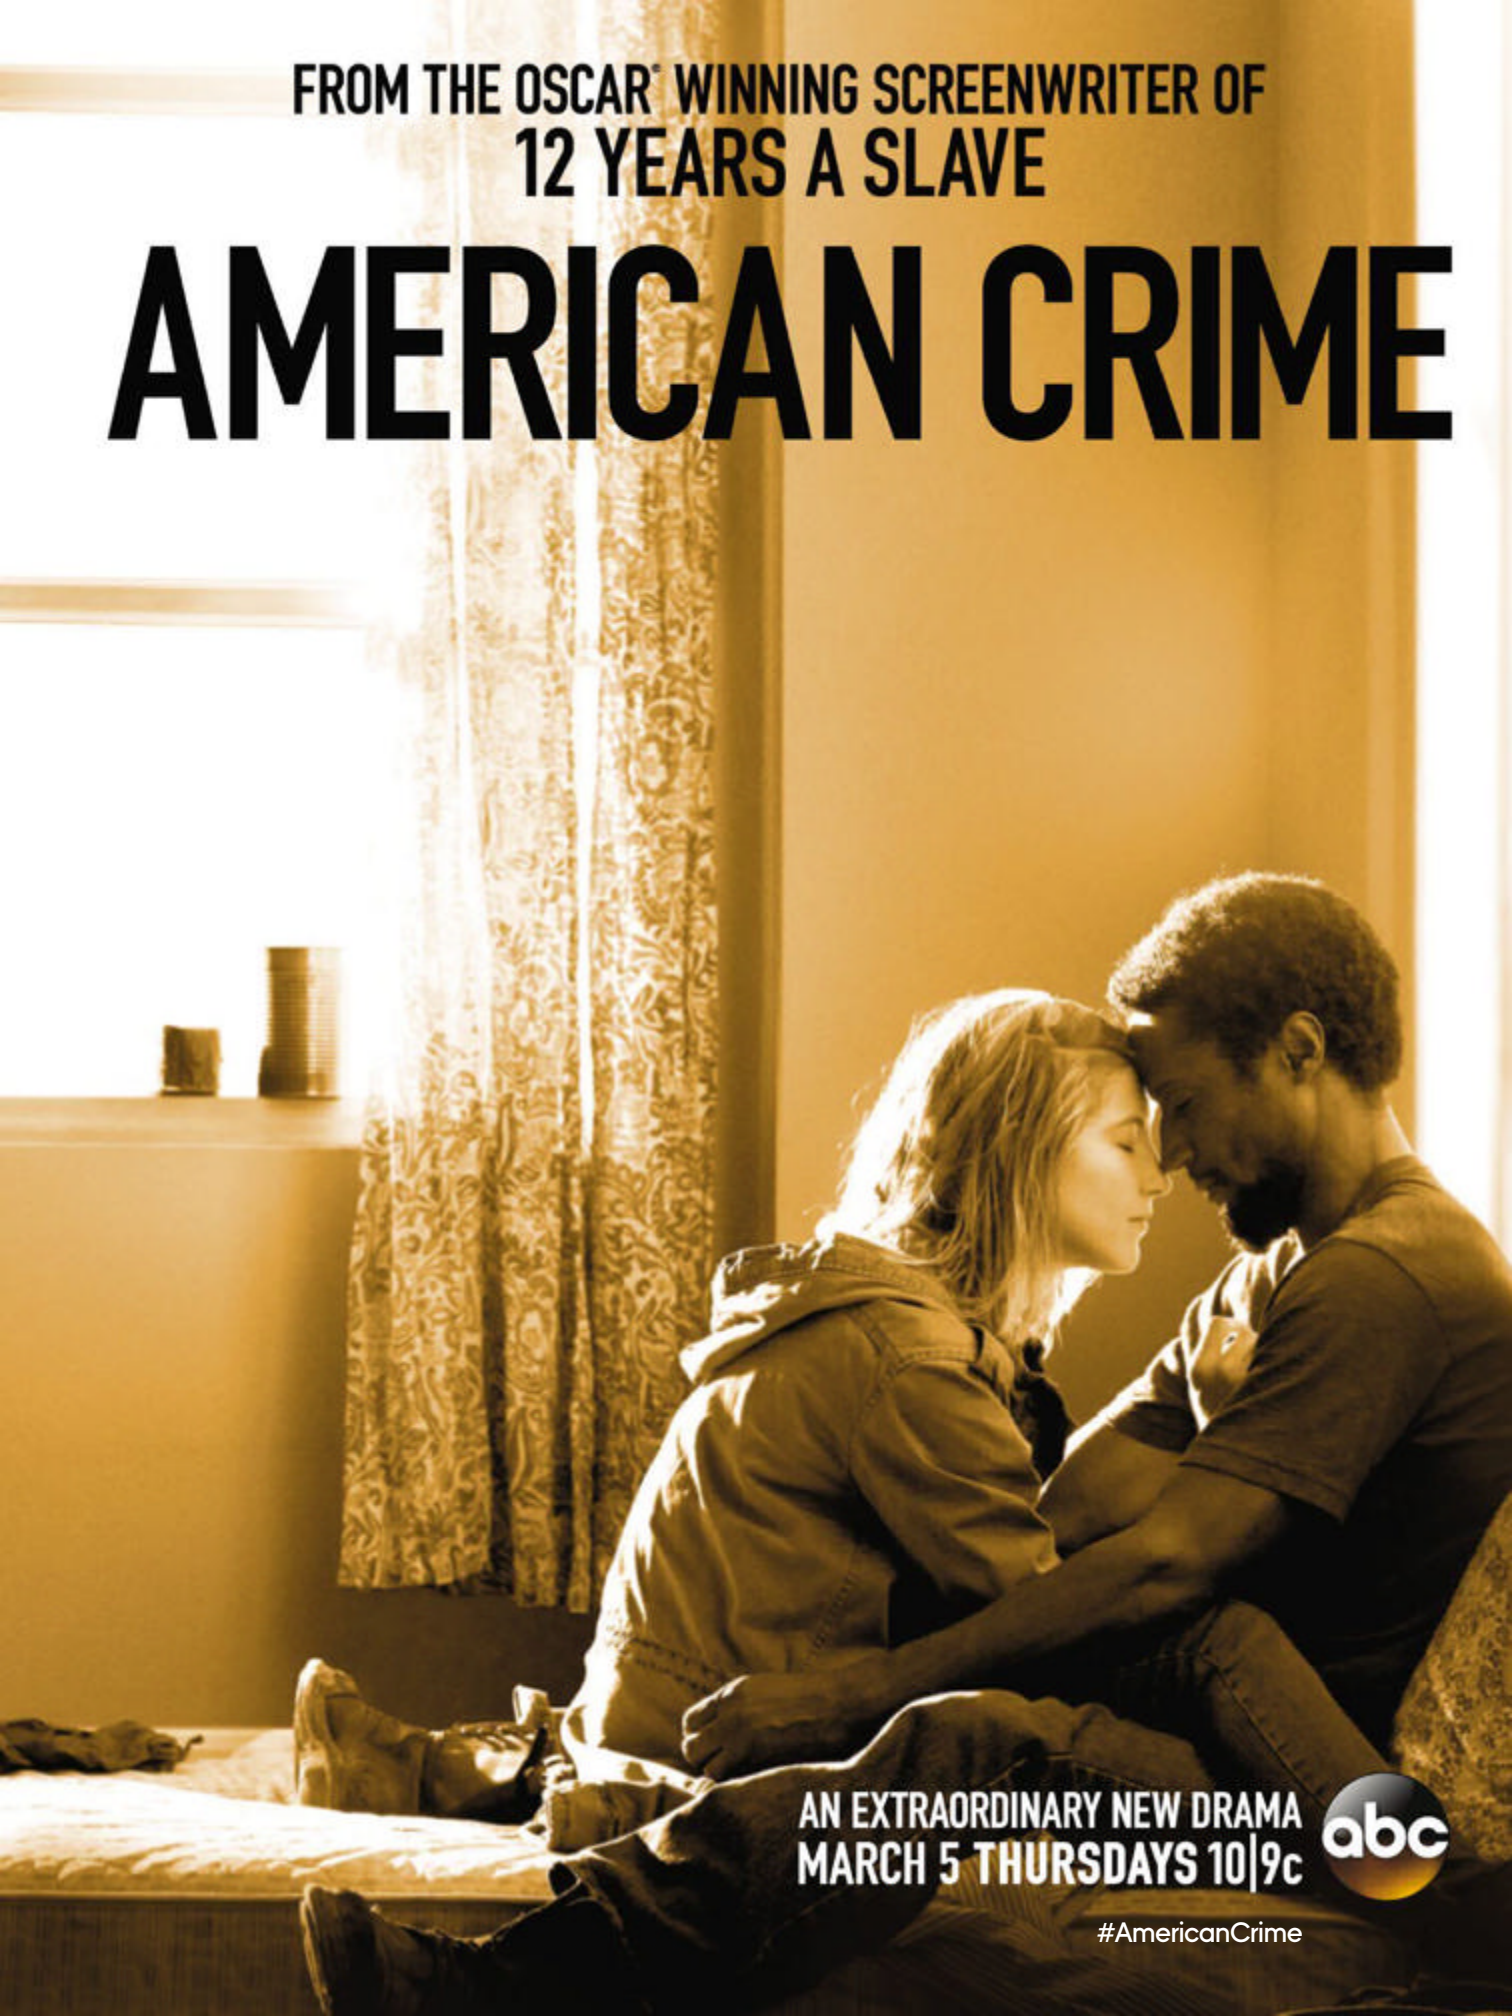

WHO'S THAT BATMAN?

Reprising his role as Batman from The LEGO Movie, Will Arnett—in Val Kilmer's suit from Batman Forever—almost went unrecognized alongside Tegan and Sara and the Lonely Island during their performance of the nominated song “Everything Is Awesome.”

SCREEN ACTORS GUILD AWARDS®

LOS ANGELES January 25, 2015

It was a night to remember at this year's SCREEN ACTORS GUILD AWARDS and PEOPLE/EIF POST-AWARDS GALA. Everyone looked glam with complimentary products and makeup touch ups at the L'ORÉAL PARIS Beauty Bar. When the party went late, guests traded their heels for flats from custom Rollasole vending machines.

ALI FEDOTOWSKY WHAT I EAT IN A DAY

The 5'7" E! correspondent—and former Bachelorette!—is mostly vegetarian. “I’ll allow myself fish or shrimp once in a while,” she says. But sweets? Those are an almost daily indulgence.

HYDRATION

30 to 40 oz. of water daily

BREAKFAST

Coffee with almond milk and cinnamon
Plain oatmeal
½ cup of wheat pasta with tomato sauce and Parmesan cheese

LUNCH

Green salad with cucumber, carrots, egg whites and 1½ tbsp. of honey mustard dressing, topped with a black bean burger

SNACKS

½ cup dried wasabi peas
Handful of almonds

DINNER

Mixed greens with strawberries, blueberries, walnuts, grapes, celery and passion fruit dressing
Glass of red wine

DESSERT

2 oz. square of milk chocolate

TOTAL CALORIES:

THE VERDICT

“Fab job on the fruit and veggies, but the overall intake of sugar is a bit high,” says dietitian Keri Glassman of NutritiousLife.com. “You don’t need pasta and oatmeal for breakfast. A more balanced meal would be the oatmeal with eggs on the side or topped with some nuts and seeds. I like the idea of a cold dinner, but I would skip the fruit dressing on her salad—the actual fruit is sweet enough. Good for her, however, for enjoying a glass of wine and piece of chocolate!”

HER FOOD & EXERCISE PHILOSOPHY

“I love pasta, so I eat it in the mornings—that way I can burn it off all day,” says Fedotowsky, 30, who cohosted E!’s pre-Oscars beauty special. “My job has me running all over, so I’m always on my feet. I hike on the weekends, and I do hot yoga three times a week.”

One Last Thing

Olivia Wilde

The actress, 30, stars in the new horror-thriller The Lazarus Effect

Last meal I prepared

I just made risotto like 10 minutes ago. I like to cook, but I also have the easiest audience in the world. My fiancé [Jason Sudeikis] has no sense of smell—he was born without it—so he thinks everything I cook tastes amazing! It really builds my confidence.

Last sunrise I watched

Well, because I have a baby, it was not very long ago! It wasn't in the drunken haze it used to be. It was maybe a week ago, and I was up early with Otis [10 months].

Last game I played

Jason got me a huge Scrabble board for Christmas that's on a lazy Susan. All the pieces are huge, and now that I'm an old person, that really helps my elderly eyesight.

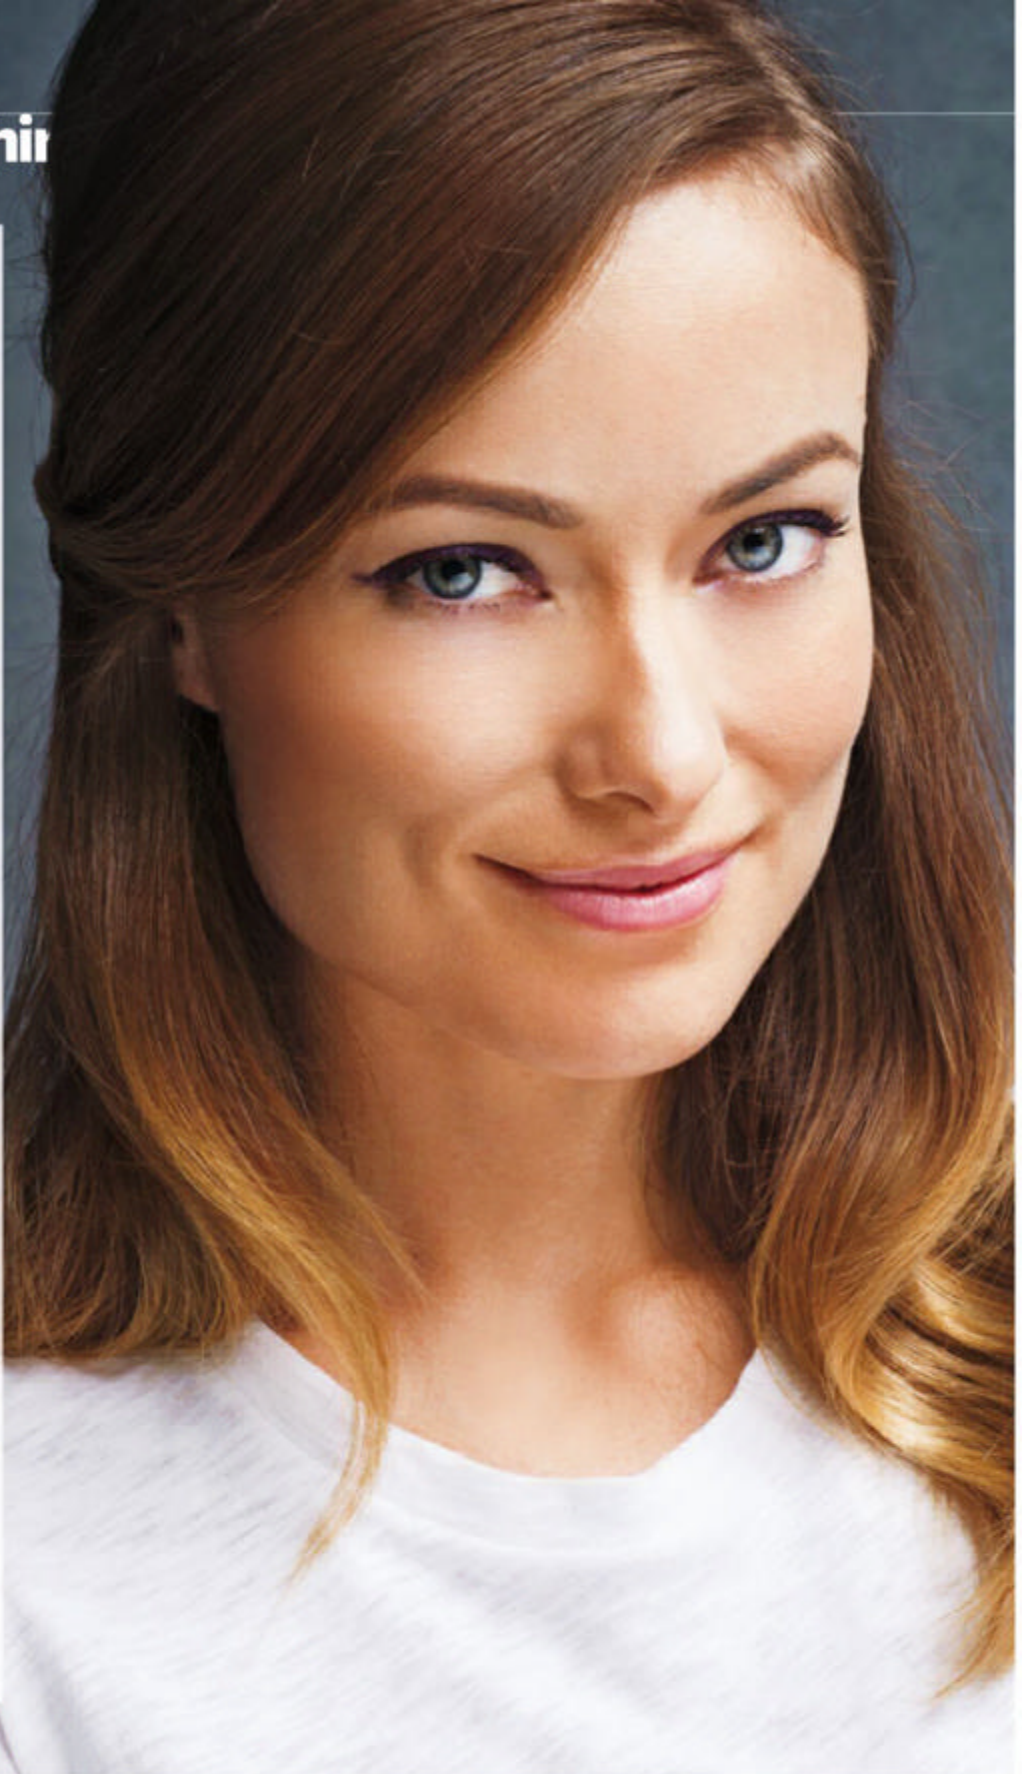

Last thing I misplaced

Everything, all the time, always. I've had mommy brain since I was like 15. I don't understand how everyone keeps their two gloves that match each other or their keys and wallet. I don't understand it.

Last book I loved

I loved Lena Dunham's book [Not That Kind of Girl]. Loved it! It was so brilliant, and I absolutely recommend it to everyone: man or woman, young or old.
